Famous Women Gather in Twenty-Fifth Annual Convention.

Elizabeth Cady Stacton the Oldest Member Present-Her Famous Suffrage Res-olution of 1848 Recalled - How Susan B. Anthony First Began.

ICOPYRIGHT, 18/3.7

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15, 1893. - Famous women are gathering in Washington to attend the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the National American Woman's Suffrage association. The women who were famous at the Herman & Hess

The partnership hereiofore existing between T. A. Warkins and R. H. Kenagy, nuder the firm name of Kenagy & Watkins, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, T. A. Warkins refiring from the firm. The business will be continued by R. H. Kenagy and E. M. Fitzroy, under the firm name of Kenagy & Fitzroy, who assume all liabilities of the firm and will collect all debts due firm first above named.

The women who were famous at the first memorial convention are still at the head of the movement, though the active work has been placed into younger hands. In those early days the movement met with the ridicule all innovations contend against, and few were found willing to encounter the firm name of Kenagy & Fitzroy, who assume all liabilities of the firm and will collect all debts due firm first above named.

In addition to these addresses there will be interesting reports read by Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton on 'Congressional Work," Mrs. Clara Bewick Colby on "Federal Suffrago," Mary H. Williams "Governors' Opinions on Woman Suffrage," Ruchel Foster Avery on "Co-lumbian Exposition Work," Miss Laura Clay on "Southern Work," and a number of others. Other speakers invited are Rev. David Gregg, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Mrs. Lucy Stone, Rev. Anna Garlin Spencer, Hon. William Dudley Foulke, Laura de Force Gordon, Mrs. Bertha Honore Palmer, H. B. Black-

Warren, of Wyoming, and Harriet May Mills. Here is a list of the officers of the association: President, Susan B. Anthony; vice president at large, Rev. Anna Howard Shaw; corresponding secretary, Rachel Foster Avery; reading secretary, Alice Stone Blackwell: treasurer, Harriet Tsylor Upton; auditor, William Dudley Foulke. In addition to these are the honorary presidents and all the living ex-presidents of the organization.

There are thirty-two anxiliary state associations, and the presidents of all these are expected to report upon the work of the year. At the meetings of the executive committee early this week a legislative programme will be prepared and a determined effort will be made to secure a decided intrease in the rights of women from the many legislatures now in session. There is a feeling that New York will finally pass some such strong measure as went successfully through the lower house last year. In Michigan, Minne sota and Iowa the conditions are extremely hopeful, and Kansas, it is believed, is practically certain to adopt a measure as comprehensive as the law now in effect in Wyoming.

A PARISIAN MOTHER.

The Background of Boane and Baby for Own Loveliness.

The smart American woman has still something to learn from her Parislan sister concerning the effective possibilities of motherhood. At the recent horse show afternoon parades of picturesque nursemaids attending fashionably dressed children were fine indeed, and even they fell far short of Eu-ropean perfection. The French elegante has in bonne and buby a sympathetic background for her own loveliness, and improves every opportunity for making her offspring ornamentally useful. Just at present there is a famously pretty young countess in Paris who has distanced all competitors in this line. She is the proud parent of as fine a pair of twin boys as ever cooed and cried by turns, and when my lady and her maids take their walks abroad they are the observed of all observers.

About noon every day one may meet them strolling through the wide, shady streets, estensibly seeking fresh air for the infants and incidentally gathering in large consignments of admiration for the youthful mother. On either nurses, who are big, rosy-cheeked peas-ant women with fresh, country skins and kind, comely eyes. These attendants are artistically gotten up in pearl gray cashmere gowns, made with short, skirts and plain, tight-fitting waists. On their sleek heads they wear crisp, high-crowned Swiss caps, encircled with puffs of pink ribbon of almost sash width that are tied in a bow behind and fall in long streamers to the hem of their frocks. Their expansive aprons are miracles of sheer snowy muslin and lace. They wear collars and cuffs to match and about their shoulders fall round, half long, gray bengaline cleaks, lined with rose to match their cap ribbons. These big, broad-shouldered women each carry a dimpled baby, the fineness and amplitude of whose white garments fall in foam-like masses over their arms. They are taught to bear their young charges so well that every touch will tell and enhance the almost pathetic grace of the slender figure that walks between. For handsome as are the pictures, nounous and infants present, they, of course, are merely satellites to the fair countess, who, with half-raised eyes and alim hands crossed at her waist, moves under the every reflection of her broad-brimmed hat, an idealization of tender motherhood. She is effectively fragile in appearance, has the sensative mouth, ap Worth for just such occasions.
